दुर्गा-दादरा

बाँबे टॉकीजकृत "अछुतकन्या" या बोलपटांतील गाणीं आज मुंबईमध्ये ज्याच्यात्याच्या तोंडी घोलत आहेत; आणि यांत नवल तें कोणतें ?—कारण हीं गाणीं साधीं, सरळ असलीं तरी अत्यंत कर्णमधुर व खऱ्या गानानंदाचा लाभ करून देणारी आहेत, याबद्दल कोणाचेंही दुमत होईल असे वाटत नाही.

या रेकॉर्डवर दोन अप्रतिम गानसंवाद मुद्रित केले आहेत. देविकाराणीचा मंजुळ आवाज आणि अशोककुमाराचा गंभीर आवाज यांच्या मधुर संयोगामुळे

हीं गाणीं तुम्हांला मोहून टाकतील. या दोन्ही गाण्यांच्या चाली तुम्हाला अत्यंत आकर्षक वाटतील.

कस्तुरी— मैं बनकी चिडिया बनके
बन-बन बोलूं रे ॥
प्रताप— मैं बनका पन्छी बन के
संग-संग डोलूं रे ॥
कस्तुरी— मैं डाल डाल उड़ जाऊं।
नहि पकड़ाई मैं आऊं ॥
प्रताप— तुम डाल डाल मैं पात-पात,
बिन पकड़े कभी न छोड़ूं,
संग-संग डोलूं रे ॥

दुसरी बाजू:—

कस्तुरी— खेतकी मूली, बाग का आम...
मैं तो हूं छोरा, तूं तो है बाम।
सावनकी बदरी, सावनकी बदरी।
चलूं तेरे साथ न करीयो बकदरी ॥
खांडको सुरमा, खांडको सुरमा।
राखूं तोहे जैसे आंखोंमें सुरमा ॥
गुडकी भेली; गुडकी भेली।
साथ रहूं जैसे बेला चमेली ॥

THE RECORD COLLECTOR -

MR. MALLAPPA ANKALGI [SOLAPUR]

It was a great experience and a surprise to meet Mr.Mallappa Ankalgi - a veteran record collector whom we met accidentally. Mr.Ankalgi is around 78 years old - and still continues his passion towards 78's. Knowing my passion towards old records,my maid servant once told me about a mad man who lives in slums and has a pile of records(plates) touching from ground to ceiling. I immediately informed other committee members - Mr.Ashok Thobde and Mr.Mohan Sohoni. We together met him at his residence and interviewed him for several hours. We wish to present the gist of our talk to TRN readers.

Mr.Ankalgi has a large collection of about three thousand old 78's from very early period. The collection includes records of classical and film music. Although a carpenter by profession he was a cronic case of cinegoers. He used to see movies with his friend Abdul Hamid. He purchased a spring winding type gramophone machine with brass horn in exchange of one wooden cupboard which he had made during his apprenticeship. Until recently he used to listen his most favourite songs on this machine with all the distortions and surface noise. He complains about nonavailability of the needles/pins. He tried to sharpen the used blunt needles - and even tried thorns of various sizes but doesn't like sound from electrically driven lightweight modern gramophone pick ups. He strongly believes playing 78's on original machines and that real musical treasure is inscribed in these grooves of 78's.

He is collecting records from last fifty and odd years. He has records of Gauharjan, Pearasahib, Bai Sundrabai, Keshavrao Bhosle, Bal Gandharva, Bapurao Pendharkar, Bai Laxmibai - some of his favourite classical music singers. He is also fond of Marathi, Kannada and Hindi film songs.

He lives in a colony spread parallel to Railway lines in Solapur. He is alone now,but remarks sarcastically that he lives with his partner - Mr.Kundanlal Saigal. He still remembers the day when he saw Saigal in Bombay. Among the other film personalities his most favourites are - Pankaj Mullick, Kanandevi, Suraiyya, Pahari Sanyal, Noorjahan, Ashok Kumar K.C.Dey, Rajkumari, Shamshad Begum, Mohammad Rafi, Talat Mahamood, Lata Mangeshkar....just utter their names and Mr.Ankalgi will take out their records.

Bal Gandharva is yet another fascination of Mallapa. He told us about a programme of Bal Gandharva held at Seth Manikchand Shaha's Bungalow at Solapur. He claims that Gandharva's recording was done during this concert and it was one of the early discs that was cut here. Mr.Ankalgi gave us information about Krishna Solapurkar and Mehboobjan of Solapur and also some other singers from Solapur who have cut discs. He also took me to Krishna Solapurkar's house.

We asked him about most memorable incidence in his life when he was collecting the records. He told us that in those days traders from Bombay used to bring lot of different kind of items in Tuesday Bazaar at Solapur. One day a huge collection appeared in the market. The trader didn't know about my interest. I told him that I am a carpenter and I want these records for decorating the ceiling in the house of my client. He gave me the entire lot just for five hundred rupees and I found my treasure in it. Yet in another incidence, I bought Saigal's record " Dukh Ke Ab Din Bitat Nahin " for forty rupees when an average brand new gramophone record was available for three to four rupees.

He feels sorry about today's music and says that it can't be compared with the music of his time. Today we see many record collectors around us but it is quite remarkable that Mr. Ankalgı began his collection in extreme adverse financial conditions. In spite of many difficulties his passion continued. We have also recorded his interview as oral history and whenever we listen to it we feel living in the old golden period. Thanks to this veteran record collector and salute to his passion towards old gramophone records.

BAL GANDHARVA

b. 1887 Pune; d. 1967 Pune. Legendary stage actor, singer. Household name in Maharashtra. Real name Narayan Shripad Rajhans. As a child, impressed freedom fighter Lokmanya Tilak, who named him 'Bal Gandharva'. Learnt vocal music from Mehboob Khan and Bhaskar Rao Bakhle. Renowned for his impeccable acting and singing in female roles. (Picture shows Bal Gandharva in his typical female role)

NARAYAN SHREEPAD RAJHANSALIAS BAL GANDHARVA

Gandharva means a celestial singer. In Indian mythology Gandharva's and Apsara's (beautiful women) entertained God's in heaven in their courts.

In Maharashtra, this century witnessed five male singers who were titled - GANDHARVA. These are:

Bhoo (Land) Gandharva - Mr. Rahimatkhani Huddukhan (...-1922)

Bal (Juvenile) Gandharva - Mr. N.S. Rajhans (1888-1967)

Sawai (Super) Gandharva - Mr. Rambhau Kundgolkar (1886-1952)

Chhota (Small) Gandharva - Mr. Saudagar Nagnath Gore (1918-..)

Kumar (Young) Gandharva - Mr. Shivputra S. Komkali (1924-1992)

In addition to these Gandharva's there are several other viz. Maharashtra, Anand, Guni, Ditto, Kinchit and so on. Most of these were child prodigies and were discovered in their early teens. They became popular amongst the music lovers in Maharashtra and were titled - Gandharva.

Bal Gandharva began his career as a male singer playing female roles in Marathi Drama. He was gifted with a melodious voice. Although he did not receive formal training in Indian Classical Music, composers like Mr. Govindrao Tembe shaped his singing and style through the songs in the plays he was staging. Old gramophone records of Gauhar Jan, Malka Jan, Janki Bai, Joharabai and Moujuddin Khan were of immense help to the musicians and the students in those days in addition to the formal and rigorous training in Indian Classical Music.

Early part of this century (1905 - 1930) was a golden period for the Marathi theatre and music was the integral part of it. Bal Gandharva was the most popular amongst his contemporaries and ruled over the stage for almost half the century. After 1930's, he also acted in films, tried to revive his drama company repeatedly, went through many ups and downs in his personal as well as professional life.

Bal Gandharva was a legend in his life time and had a big following among the actors and singers from many other states like Gujarat, Karnatak, Andhra Pradesh and Tamilnadu. His music haunted the non-Marathi audiences as much as it did those of Maharashtrians.

His voice was as sensitive as a seismograph and it could register and communicate the whole gamut of emotions from erotic to pathetic. His Gayaki (style of singing) has been described as revelatory, a kind of Bhav Samadhi he shared with his audiences. The numerous song studded plays in which he acted and sang are recalled with nostalgia by old time theatre goers even today. His unparalleled voice and songs have won a permanent place in the minds of music lovers and theatre goers in Maharashtra.

On June 26,1968 - Bal Gandharva's birth anniversary - the Bal Gandharva Theatre was inaugurated in Pune. Built by the city's Municipal Corporation, this stands today as one of the very few memorials raised to Bal Gandharva.

Bal Gandharva cut several discs for over forty years and this is the only audio treasure he has left for the posterity. Following discography gives the detailed account of these records. A rough estimate shows about 400 songs - about two hundred records - issued on different record labels. Largely he recorded for HMV, however his early records were made on Beka, Pathe, Sun Disc, and Zonophone. At the tail end of his musical career he also recorded on Columbia and Odeon labels. It is interesting to note that he has not cut any record for Broadcast. This company was operative during (1930-1940) and has made long playing (five to eight minutes play time) records of many wellknown artists of the time including the several contemporaries of Bal Gandharva. Also except Pathe he has not cut any 12" record. There is no record on James-Opera and Ramagraph labels. He is known to have recorded on cylinders but no cylinder recording has been traced so far.

Many veteran record collectors like Mr. Prabhakar Datar, Bal Samant, Madhukar Sherikar, Narayan Mulani, K.R. Merchant Mallappa Ankalgil etc. have preserved these records. June 26, 1988 marked the birth centenary of Bal Gandharva and HMV reissued a new set of long playing records and cassettes. What is needed now is to transfer his entire recordings carefully using the modern equipments and to reissue these on the Compact Discs. This is important since these historical recordings represent the audio past of our musical culture.

Looking back in time one can ask a question viz. what is the contribution of Bal Gandharva to Indian theatre and the music ? He may be said to have perfected the form of musical drama. In the beginning of this century, Pure and Light Classical music was confined at the courts of kings, Nawabs and rich persons of the society. It could also be heard at the kotha's performed by the dancing girls and Tawaifs. Both these avenues were not available for an average middle class family. Bal Gandharva along with others, brought in the Raga, Dadra, Gazal, Kawwali, Thumri and other forms of classical music into the houses and the minds of millions, simply through his songs from the dramas. This is the greatest contribution he has made in Maharashtra in the early period of this century.

It will be noted that there are several matrix numbers that have not been traced or accounted for in the BL matrix series. It is believed that the un-traced numbers were all recordings by Bal Gandharva - of both new titles as well as re-recordings of previously recorded titles - which were either rejected - or held in reserve - as is the case with those titles later issued on the TWIN label.

NOTES

BAL GANDHARVA - Narayanrao Shripad Rajhans - by real name - was possibly the most outstanding personality of the Marathi stage - whose career spanned several decades - and whose artistic brilliance has been captured via the sound recordings that he made - an aspect that has also helped to preserve some of the finest aspects of 'Marathi Natya Sangeet' for record collectors.

BAL GANDHARVA's recording career spanned from 1907 with the BEKA RECORD to 1950 with the COLUMBIA recordings - a magnificent achievement in any artiste's life-time of recording - and although this discography attempts to be definitive - there may yet be some - sample copies or test pressings - along with stray issues on the various labels that have yet to be located.

Many collectors of BAL GANDHARVA recordings have been puzzled by the fact that there are more than one recorded version of some of his most famous songs - The question being how to date the various recordings and place them in the context of his recording career. The preceding discography provides the information as to which version of a particular song was recorded first and all subsequent recordings - in the same or a different RAG.

It will be noted in the preceding listings that several matrix numbers that should be attributed to recordings of BAL GANDHARVA - have still not been traced. It is clear that the introduction of 'electric' recording technique in 1926 - encouraged The Gramophone Co., Ltd., to re-record some of BAL GANDHARVA's' most popular recordings - thus it is possible that most of the un-traced numbers in the 'BL series' of recordings by Douglas Ewen Larter in Bombay during early 1925 - were not issued due to artistic reasons - but there is the remote possibility that some record collector has 'sample' copies of the missing 'BL' recordings which might prove their existence and content.

There is also the possibility that BAL GANDHARVA made recordings for the International Talking Machine Co.m.b.H., Berlin, who are known to have taken a good number of recordings between 1908 and 1912 - issued on the 10½ inch - ODEON RECORD - but thus far none have been located - besides there may also have been other recordings made for BEKA RECORD, SUN DISC RECORD and PATHE - that have not been traced thus far.

Any additional information to this discography would be appreciated.

I would like to acknowledge the assistance of Prabhakar Datar, Suresh Chandvankar, V.K. Dubey, Smruti Sodagar and Ruth Edge in the preparation of this discography and also S.K. Pandit and S.V. Gokhale.

Stamps on Records

Adam Miller

Record collectors cannot fail to have noticed the presence on the record labels of small stamps. This article aims to explain their original purpose, and the author's interest in them now.

The stamps were affixed to the records by the Recording companies. The stamp was a sort of receipt showing that the company has paid to the copyright owner (or his assigned agent), the appropriate royalty payment in respect of Mechanical Copyright. This grew out of the old habit of 'stamping' printed music with the composer's signature. The composer would be paid by the publisher so much per 'stamp'. With the advent of music reproduction onto media that required mechanical devices for its reproduction (Cylinders, Records and Pianola Rolls), a new form of Mechanical Copyright was required. This led to the introduction in Great Britain of the Copyright Act of 1911, and the Board of Trade Regulations (1912) following.

The section of the Regulations relevant here stated that "The adhesive label ... shall be an adhesive paper label, square in shape, the design to be entirely enclosed within a circle, and the side of the label not to be greater than $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in length. The label shall not bear the effigy of the Sovereign or any other person ..."

The Regulations came into force on 1 July 1912. Australia followed with its own Regulations a year or two later. Rates were initially $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ for works already published, and 5% for new works. On 3rd November 1928, these were increased to $3\frac{1}{8}\%$ and $6\frac{1}{4}\%$ respectively.

Essentially what happened was this:

- The recording company, having decided to produce a particular recording, were obliged to ascertain the copyright holders of the songs (generally two - one per side)
- Various agencies such as Copyrights Ltd existed to assist in this search. In other cases, inquiry letters were written to various Publishing Houses or composers' organisations requesting this information. There were various scenarios possible here:
 1. The Composer retained the rights
 2. A Publishing House owned the rights
 3. The Recording Company owned the rights anyway
 4. The copyright owner has nominated an organisation to look after his rights (for a fee, normally 10%)
 5. Some combination of the above, eg the Composer has assigned 50% of the rights to a Publishing House.
- The copyright controller was permitted to issue stamps at a value which represented the amount of royalty payable on a single recording. The Recording company was then obliged to purchase sufficient stamps at face value to affix one per record that they planned to produce.

Herein lay the main problem. The value of the stamp was a percentage of the RETAIL price of the record. While most records selling at a time fell into one of a small set of prices, records sold through Woolworths were still cheaper than the same record sold through Harrods, for example. Furthermore, the same composition could appear on diverse labels, with different prices.

- If the copyright controller did not have stamps, there were several alternatives:
 1. None were used, and the amount owed was a debt from the Recording company to the copyright owner.
 2. The Recording company could supply it's own generic stamps
 3. Stamps could be supplied from an intermediary, such as Copyrights Ltd.

In the case of 1. above, often the record label had printed upon it a facsimile of a stamp.

- Once the stamps arrived, they would be torn individually from the sheets and applied to the record label. Often there would be two lots of stamps from different suppliers. Where there were multi-track sides or joint compositions, the number of stamps increased. The author has handled a record with no less than seven different stamps on its labels.

A scenario may help to explain some of the complexities inherent in this system.

Say HMV wished to produce a recording of Sir Harry Lauder singing two songs, one by Composer A, and another by Composer B. They decide to print 500 on their cheap label to sell at 1/6, and 200 on their deluxe label to sell at 2/6. Their copyright department are aware that composer A is a member of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers. Therefore they duly write to the Society requesting that they supply 500 stamps at $1\frac{1}{8}d$ plus 200 at $1\frac{7}{8}d$ (these values being $6\frac{1}{4}\%$ of the retail prices respectively). Composer A has requested that his Society take responsibility for his stamping so they take sufficient blank sheets of their own generic stamp and handstamp 500 of them with $1\frac{1}{8}d$ and 200 with $1\frac{7}{8}d$. They also handstamp each stamp with Composer A's initials. The money remitted from HMV to pay the value of stamps is passed on to Composer A, less 10% commission

HMV asked Copyrights Ltd to ascertain who owns the copyright for Composer B's song. This turns out to be Francis, Day & Hunter. F.D.&H. are then contacted and asked to remit the appropriate stamps. As they have large numbers of similar requests, F.D.&H. have many values pre-printed and so the 500 $1\frac{1}{8}d$ and 200 $1\frac{7}{8}d$ stamps are supplied from stock.

The stamps are now applied to the appropriate side of the record and the records distributed. Thus, should Composer A find a recording of his song for sale, he can check that his stamp appears on it, and at the correct value for the price of the record.

As can be imagined, this was all rather labour intensive for all parties. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that many preferred the use of imprints on the record label, or using stamps without specific value, the actual amount being known only within an accounting transaction. The stamps waned in popularity rapidly after 1930, and were almost completely gone by 1940. In Australia, however, several companies persisted into the age of LPs and 45s, with J Albert & Son still using stamps on pianola rolls after Decimalisation (1966).

Stamps were issued in many countries, with the notable exception of the USA. They were issued in four categories:

1. For the Composer himself. These are rare, and are generally those issued under the auspices of the Incorporated Society of Authors Playwrights and Composers (ISAPC) who supported the introduction of stamps, and invited their members to submit designs for their individual stamps. Only a few took this up, such as C. Villers-Stanford, Gordon Davson, William Wallace and Simon Jones, while most were content to use the Society's generic stamp.

2. By a Music Publisher. These are the most widespread, with over 120 known, such as Francis, Day & Hunter, J. Albert & Son, Lawrence Wright, and many lesser and obscure companies such as Lawrence Hamilton Ltd and Worton David Ltd.

3. By the Recording Company themselves. Most had their own stamps, such as HMV, The Gramophone Co, Metropole, Cinch and Zonophone. These would be used when the company owned the copyright, when stamps were wanted but could not be obtained from the copyright owner, or where the copyright owner agreed that the Recording Company could account for the royalty with their own stamps. This latter option was the method pushed for by William Boosey's Performing Right Society¹, yet was bitterly opposed by the I.S.A.P.C. as being open to abuse.

4. By an organisation acting for the copyright owner. These sprang up in anticipation of the Act to assist both composers and recording companies. Examples include The Copyright Protection (Mechanical Rights) Society, Mechanical Copyright Protection Society, B.I.E.M and Universal Copyrights.

The author's interest is both philatelic and sociological. From a philatelic point of view, these stamps (which are classified as Cinderellas) are fascinating for their wide variety of issuers and countries, their variations in paper, printing and perforation, their many errors and provisional usages, plus the fact that they have not been widely studied and that there is very little published to date. From a sociological standpoint, there is much of interest in the issuers themselves which has required investigation into the Music Publishers, the Recording companies, the composers and the Copyright Agencies.

The author is currently working on producing a simplified catalogue listing of the known stamps. Part 1 (Australia) of this appeared in a recent issue of Cinderellas Australasia, the quarterly publication of the Cinderella Stamp Club of Australasia. Part II (UK companies, A-C) will appear this year.

Key to Stamps.

1. J. Albert & Son Pty Ltd (Australia) 1940s 1¹/₄d vermilion and green. One of the most commonly encountered stamps in Australasia.
2. Allan & Co (Australia) 7d blue and black. From a pianola roll.
3. Alfred Jarvis. (Australia) A composer's stamp, unique in having the name of the composition incorporated in the design.
4. HMV. (UK) Considering the size of the company, examples of their own 'Tudor Rose' stamp are very scarce.
5. Lawrence Wright. (UK) Unused multiples are very rare as, unlike postage stamps, they were not sold to collectors.
6. The Gramophone Co. (UK & Europe) Most of their designs featured 'Nipper'. This is an issue of the French branch.
7. EDIFO. (France) One of the precursors to the BIEM conglomerate, they produced a huge variety of stamps.
8. Mecolico. (UK) Eventually merged with The Copyright Protection Society, they represented the largest copyright organisation. Still active today under the name M.C.P.S.
9. M.C.P.S. (UK) Modern stamp issued for the importation of Cassettes into the UK.
10. Fleming & Co. Not a royalty stamp, but one of a huge variety of retail shop labels also found on records. They form an interesting side collection.

Cataloguing requires three areas of detailed information:

1. The stamps themselves. This detail can be gained from a close examination of many copies of the stamps to detect changes in perforation, printing method, paper, watermark. The many provisional values and small print runs provide a wide variety in overprints (handstamped, manuscript and even typewritten) pertaining to value or the name of the copyright holder.

2. The various companies and composers involved. Composer information is fairly available at the reference section of your local library. Information on the various Recording companies is also fairly good, except the more obscure ones, such as ARIEL or METROPOLE. The music publishers and copyright organisations are much more difficult, with the exception of a few major players. Many flourished only briefly between the years 1912 and 1940, and were not deemed to be important or interesting enough to have been studied and documented previously.

3. Dating of the stamps. It is important for a catalogue to be able to classify when a particular stamp, or related set of stamps were in use, and when a change in design occurred. The only means to ascertain this is via the date of the recording upon which the stamp was originally found. When a number of copies of a stamp found on different recordings gives a good agreement as to dates; i.e. 90% of all copies of a set of stamps are found on recordings that date from (say) 1925 to 1927, this set can be confidently catalogued under these dates, and made distinct from (say) a similar set having a design, perforation or colour change, that generally appears on recordings from 1927 to 1930. Unfortunately, guides for dating recordings are not generally available. Also, stamps are often soaked off the record without any note being taken of which record a particular stamp originated from. The author has made heavy use of an amateur publication entitled "The (almost) complete 78rpm Record Dating Guide". This has a very good coverage of many English and American recordings but still has gaps. The dating of stamps from Australasian pressings has been particularly frustrating. Likewise, there is nothing freely available for dating pianola rolls.

I have not as yet seen any stamps specifically issued by known companies for use in India, or issued by any Indian Publishing house or Agency. The few Indian pressings I have seen have all been Gramophone Co recordings, and the only stamps on the few with stamps were Gramophone Co UK stamps with 'Nipper' the dog.

If you feel that you can help in dating recordings or providing information on the companies or their stamps as they appeared either on Indian pressings or records brought into India, please contact the Author through the Secretary. If you also have an interest in the stamps or have personal knowledge of their use, the Author would be especially pleased to hear from you
